

CURRICULUM VITAE Roman Studer

Roman Studer (1977), Dr. phil., CEO of the Swiss Bankers Association (SBA)

Roman Studer has been CEO of the Swiss Bankers Association since August 2023. He also sits on the Executive Committee of the European Banking Federation (EBF), the Foundation Board of the Swiss Finance Institute (SFI) and the Board of Directors of Arbeitgeber Banken, which represents banks in their capacity as employers.

He started out as an academic, working at Oxford University and then as Assistant Professor at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). His first post in the private sector was as a management consultant at Boston Consulting Group (BCG), where his responsibilities included advising multinational financial institutions. In 2011, he moved to UBS, where he held various positions, most recently Head of Governmental Affairs Switzerland from 2018 to 2023, with a remit covering all regulatory and economic policy developments in Switzerland of relevance to the bank.

Roman Studer studied politics, economics and economic history at the University of Zurich as well as at Oxford University, where he obtained a PhD in economic history.
